

Dear Colleagues:

My name is Ricky Wang, a master's degree holder in internal medicine of Heilongjiang University of TCM. Being a registered member for more than ten years, I have been actively joined different committees in our association for the voluntary work, and gradually familiar with the operation mechanisms of our association. Besides the regular practice in the clinic, I also spent a lot of time to upgrade myself in TCM areas. After years of preparation, I feel now I am ready to put my effort into our group stream to move our profession forward in the right direction.

Where we are now?

We are on the stage that our extremities were trimmed to fit scientific shoes. As the result, "dry needle" people think they are doing acupuncture, massage therapists think their cupping is the same as acupuncturist did. Internally, we trim ourselves as well.

Regards to human body system, physical structure is important, but the space between the structure also play important roles as well. As an unique member in the whole health care family, we are the only group can help people with body space management strategy. The major tools to detect whether the spaces between the structures within the normal range or not are pulse and tongue diagnosis. If you put "BaGua" on the pulse or tongue area, you will notice how important they are.

What we will focus on?

1. Academic upgrade. Make ourselves doing better within our practice scope.
2. Continue improve the quality of education.
3. Interact with other professions.
4. Educate the public.

Thank you for your support!
